

Appreciation

As Editor of volume 42 of the Journal of Hydrology (NZ), I am very pleased to acknowledge the contribution made by the reviewers of the manuscripts received during the year. Their willingness to spend time on this task enables us to maintain the standard of the material published in the Journal, and therefore the scientific standing of the Journal itself. Thank you to:

Gabor Bekesi
Murray Close
Chris Daughney
Maurice Duncan
Sandy Elliott
George Griffiths
Matt Hickman
Murray Hicks
Rick Jackson
Alistair McKerchar
Vladimir Nikora
Colin O'Loughlin
Alan Porteous
Frank Scrimgeour
Alexei Sidorchuk
Alistair Smaill
Graeme Smart
Joseph Thomas
Stephen Thompson
Grant Webby
Jon Williamson

Thank you, too, to Eileen McSaveney for her sterling efforts on the copy-editing front, and to Jo Dickson for layout and preparation for production. The staff of Caxton Press continue to do a fine job of producing the journal on a tight schedule.

I intend to stand down as Editor after this issue. I have appreciated the opportunity, over the last few years, of taking "turn about" with Mike Stewart to edit the Journal. Thanks to the continuing flow of quality manuscripts, we have been able to maintain and enlarge the Journal over the last few years. However, there are a lot of challenges on the horizon – electronic publishing, research-based funding, shrinking library budgets to name three. I wish my successor well, and encourage colleagues to keep those manuscripts flowing!

Paul Mosley